' x 62' x 20" intrevision 783 on the seat, we might be able to remove the seatback and the left rear seatback, and put a new seat. However, there are 3 mounting bolts in front of the backrest support. The problem is: There are only 2 in the front seat. There are 3 in the rear seat. There are 3 in the backrest. So in order to remove the seat, we must remove these 6 bolts. So I can't remove the seat, and I don't know if it is possible to change the seat. This is what it looks like: The screws on the backrest support are placed in the center of the support. Is there anyway to change the seat? A: These are all to be removed: I can't find anything that says how many are needed, or if they're all required. The car is built new so they could have changed this over the years and it's a 60's design. If they're all required to keep the seat, you'll have to buy a new one. The ones that are still intact look like they're US Steel and probably won't be particularly difficult to remove, but getting them to come out is likely going to be a challenge. There are two ways to do this. One is to try to remove them while the seat is on and the other is to remove them while the seat is on and you're going to have to get up on the seat and work the bolts out from that side. Q: How can I make JQuery sortable stop sorting once the source element is dragged out of the list? I've got the following html: Item One Item Two and the following script: `$('.item').sortable({ connectWith: ".item", receive: function(event, ui) { var column = $(this).parent(); column.find(".status").html("Status"); } });` When the user 82157476af
